United Nations Subcommittee on Prevention of Torture (SPT)	<ul style="list-style-type: none">- In the context of the 76th session of the General Assembly, a public statement was made by the new Chairman of the Subcommittee, Suzanne Jabbour, on 12 October 2021, and the abbreviated version summarizing the significant parts of this statement is as follows: "As I take over, it is my task to present to you the activities of the SPT for the year 2020, the first and principal challenge we encountered was that the SPT was not able to conduct any visit in 2020; with the last visit having taken place in October 2019, as the March 2020 visit to Argentina was suspended due to the pandemic. All SPT members have now been vaccinated, and we have elaborated a strict protocol to conduct visits under pandemic conditions. This will ensure that we do not risk transmitting the disease to those that we are visiting, hence fully abiding by the “do no harm” principle that we embrace in our work. We are planning to resume visits this month with Bulgaria, followed hopefully by another by the end of the year, and to have a full visiting program next year. But, as of today, we are not able to do more than 6 or 7 visits a year. The past year and half has seen the world being completely disrupted on many levels and in many aspects. Persons in places of deprivation of liberty were affected particularly hard. In many countries, they are detained in cramped, overcrowded, insalubrious and unhygienic conditions, with little access to healthcare. Staff is often overworked. The reduction of overcrowding of detention facilities is something that had long been pushed for by the international community and especially the SPT after several visits to different countries; but these recommendations were seldom met with adequate follow-up measures by States and relevant authorities. Overcrowding can be managed and reduced, access to healthcare can be guaranteed, special care for vulnerable groups can be put in place. SPT raised concerns regarding the management of the pandemic in some States and detention systems. The SPT also identified a lack of support in case of mental health issues in closed facilities. Furthermore, the Subcommittee remains concerned about some of the COVID-19 measures implemented in places of detention, such as, among others, the disproportionate restrictions of movement and excessive measures of isolation. The SPT has also particularly been worried about limitations imposed on national preventive mechanisms and other monitoring bodies in executing their mandate. It remains impossible to predict how long the pandemic will last, in which regions it will persist more, what the situation will be if it does and with which intensity. It is therefore a concern of the SPT as to how long the restrictive measures will remain in place. Despite the challenging circumstances brought by the pandemic and the absence of visits, the SPT found innovative ways to fulfill other aspects of its mandate. We provided NPMs and State parties with advice and recommendations issued early on in March and April 2020 on how to tackle challenges brought by the pandemic. In its newest advice issued in June 2021, the SPT stressed concerns with regard to certain measures and made new recommendations. OPCAT The Special Fund is an essential tool for complementing and strengthening the means of the Subcommittee to assist NPMs; we therefore urge States to continue providing it with supplementary financial support...This is where I would like to point out, as my predecessors did, the lack of human and financial resources of the Secretariat to fulfil its important role supporting the SPT's mandate...We are the only human rights treaty body that does not work based on regular reports submitted by States, but rather on observations gathered from visits on the field. In such contexts, and especially in the current global one, where it has never been more difficult to know what happens behind the doors of detention facilities, torture is all the more likely to occur. The work of NPMs and other organizations has thus never been more essential to ensure that these issues are known and actively addressed; and that efforts for the prevention of torture in places of deprivation of liberty are facilitated. The fact that 90 countries have ratified and 13 signed the OPCAT is an achievement in itself...Furthermore, out of the 90 State parties, 21 have not yet designated their NPM, despite their obligation to do so within a year of ratification. The previous year has demonstrated the importance of having officially designated, with appropriate mandate, independent, adequately resourced preventive mechanisms. We urge State parties that have not done so to establish their NPM, and other countries to join the important treaty that is the OPCAT. The SPT is deeply committed to supporting State signatories and countries, which want to be a party to the OPCAT on every step of this way. COVID-19 pandemic cannot be a pretext for putting human rights in the background. The prohibition of torture is absolute.”
